What makes a brand simple?

Remarkably clear and unexpectedly fresh experiences

In a world crowded with complexity, simplicity stands out. It brings clarity instead of confusion, decision instead of doubt. And the rewards are real. Simplicity inspires deeper trust and greater loyalty in customers, and clears the way to innovation for employees. So unlock the power of simplicity. Take it to heart, see the opportunities and realize your organization's true potential.

Simple brands top major market indexes

Investing in a stock portfolio based on simplicity continues to beat the major indexes. A portfolio made from the publicly traded top 10 global simplest brands outperforms the major indexes.

Making innovation simpler

In our 2012 study, respondents told us that—with the notable exception of asking for a raise—nothing was more complicated in the workplace than promoting innovation. So this year, we wanted to dig a little deeper and see if we could find ways to facilitate innovation, to make it simpler. But first we needed to answer two questions:

- What's different about workplaces where people find promoting innovation simplest compared to the ones where people find it most complex?
- What kind of innovations do consumers feel make their lives the most simple?

The answer to both questions is surprisingly simple: it all comes down to purpose. Companies with employees who both understand and are committed to their organization's purpose find innovation simple. Innovations with the most obvious utilitarian purpose are the ones consumers say contribute most to making their lives simpler.

Achieving innovation in the workplace

Top attributes that most consistently describe companies where it's simplest to innovate

Innovation—the simple difference

Attributes with the biggest gaps between companies where it is simple to innovate and where it is complex

% of respondents surveyed answering "yes" to:

Management has an open door policy

It is easy to find the information that I need and share it with others at my workplace

People at my workplace are rewarded for coming up with new ideas

My immediate superior enables me to speak my mind

People at my company get ahead based on how well they do, not office politics

My workplace is quick to adopt the latest technology

My supervisor ensures I have learning opportunities

Movers and shakers

Apple loses its shine as Samsung claims a simple victory

Samsung overtakes Apple on the Global Simplicity Index as the Galaxy and the iPhone battle for smartphone supremacy.

The simple and complex sides of low cost

ALDI, 2013's simplest global brand, is no-frills but trusted by consumers to always deliver the best value and the right amount of product choice.

Ryanair, 2013's least simple global brand, is no-frills but seen as intentionally deceitful in its promises and pricing.

Bing closes in on simplicity perennial Google

Bing jumps 42 spots to land just shy of this year's top 25 global brands.

Our fourth year examining the state of simplicity around the world

To determine the global state of simplicity, we asked

10,000+
consumers

in 7
countries

to evaluate perceived points of simplicity—or complexity—in their interactions with various brands and industries.

Once the results were in, we used the data to generate two scores to measure simplicity.

A Brand Simplicity Score

A score (from roughly 0 to 1,000) that rates each brand on its perceived simplicity

Brands were evaluated based on a question related to the simplicity/complexity of products, services, interactions and communications in relation to industry peers. The score takes into consideration the consistency of responses, the difference between user and non-user perceptions and the Simplicity Score for the brand's industry.

An Industry Simplicity Score

A score (from roughly 0 to 1,000) that rates each industry on its perceived simplicity

Industries were evaluated on their contribution to making life simpler/more complex, the pain of interactions with companies within the industry and how the industry's communications rank in terms of ease of understanding, transparency/honesty, concern for customers, innovation/freshness and usefulness.

As the #1 global brand, European-based discount supermarket retailer ALDI continues to enjoy extraordinary success. With more than 9,000 stores worldwide and a brand that “focuses on the essentials, no matter what city,” ALDI has made the most of its good-value-for-the-money reputation with both recession-strapped customers and shoppers just looking to spend less.

Amazon earns the #2 ranking on the Simplicity Index, thanks in large part to an up-front customer-first commitment—like its easy-to-use, click-through purchase process. And with every part of Amazon driven by data that tracks customer experience successes and failures, it's no surprise the online retail giant keeps landing in the Top 10.

Despite a minor setback in China following a food safety scare in early 2013, KFC managed to make the Top 10 simplest global brands. Its straightforward lineup of food and pricing, paired with roadside ubiquity and a successful online coupon program, made KFC a favorite for many with an appetite for simplicity.

Its flagship product, the Android-operated Galaxy, has been stealing iPhone market share with its easy-to-use functionality and elegant design. Some respondents championed Samsung's newfound creativity, while others praised its positioning as a modern, yet accessible technology brand.

Google slips from #1 last year to #3 this year. Despite losing its grip on the top spot, however, Google is still “a synonym for simplicity,” with a friendly and intuitive user interface. And Google continues to make mobile life easier with its new app, Google Now, which gives users information that fits their needs—like mobile airline boarding passes.

You'll find French retailer, Carrefour, securely in the Top 10 again this year. The hypermarket, say respondents, carries “everything you need under one roof.” And under new CEO George Plassat, store managers can now tailor inventory in individual stores to match local tastes. That's been a huge factor for Carrefour and its rise in relevancy to customers.

Offering easy-to-assemble products at low prices and easy-to-navigate stores, the Swedish company continues building a brand that makes home furnishing simple. Now IKEA is partnering with Marriott International, lending its expertise to help create a chain of hip, budget hotels.

Not surprisingly, the iconic fast-food restaurant gets high marks for speed and convenience. But McDonald's also wins points for its accessible menu, transparent pricing and clear, concise messaging. And as concerns about obesity rise, McDonald's is moving forward with redesigned packaging to include QR codes linked to nutritional information.

International Dutch fashion retailer C&A slips but remains in the Top 10. With branches in 20 European countries, C&A is busy weaving RFID technology into its shopping experience so customers will always find the products they want on the shelves. Consumers describe C&A as a cost-effective brand you can rely on to make “shopping uncomplicated.”

10

Pizza Hut, the world's largest pizza franchise, prides itself on accessibility and convenience. And with its memorable ads and made-to-order menus, it easily rises above the competition. Now, the brand's website provides a “completely fresh online experience”—including the ability to place orders through Xbox.

83

Turns out Google+ is more of a negative than positive—the opposite of the elegant simplicity for which Google is known. Circles and Hangouts have brought clutter and confusion, and failed to lure users away from social network titan Facebook. A lack of customer focus is particularly evident on Google+ brand pages where SEO searches drive favorites rather than relevance.

84

Since its creation in 2003, LinkedIn has become a major player in social media, with 238 million users and rapidly increasing share values. Despite its financial success, LinkedIn continues to fare poorly in simplicity. Respondents cite confusing layouts and tricky privacy settings, with their biggest complaints reserved for excessive “pestering and unwanted emails” from LinkedIn.

85

HSBC has trimmed 38,000 employees and over 50 businesses in an effort to become a “smaller, simpler bank.” But there’s clearly much to be done. “There’s an impression that if you aren’t global, you aren’t wanted,” says one respondent. Consumers cite HSBC’s high minimum balance requirements and convoluted processes that delay simple transactions and betray advertised promises.

86

E.ON remains in the Bottom 10 this year, by energy tariffs that are described as confusing, inconsistent and opaque. The utilities company is a perennial simplicity loser because of distrust from consumers over complicated billing and lack of transparency. With respondents saying “utilities are a nightmare” and E.ON is “too pushy and has misleading claims” E.ON’s simplicity future is not looking bright.

87

Avis drops into the Bottom 10 this year. The American car rental company, which for 50 years told consumers “We Try Harder,” rebranded in 2012, refreshing its logo and changing its slogan to “It’s Your Space.” It appears, however, that the company will need to try something more, as respondents currently describe Avis as “not memorable” and “outdated.”

88

Scandal—from class action lawsuits to lax money laundering controls—has certainly weighed Citibank down. Yet even as the bank restructures, complex contracts plague its retail banking division, and executive bonuses amid broad cutbacks cast doubt on its investment banking division. A scarcity of ATMs and storefronts, along with a puzzling web presence, aren’t helping much, either.

92

Irish budget airline Ryanair is notorious for its hidden fees and conditional tariff traps, which mostly explain why it has landed at the very bottom of the Global Brand Simplicity Index yet again. One respondent, referring to the countless add-ons that heavily inflate the advertised base price, described the customer experience as a “minefield.”

89

Hertz can’t seem to get out of low gear or the Bottom 10. Despite the creation of a car-sharing program, the American car rental company loses points for “hidden rules” in their contracts. With locations in 145 countries around the world, Hertz still hopes to move forward following its acquisition of the Dollar Thrifty Automotive Group.

90

Once again, Allianz, a financial services and insurance brand, finds itself in the Bottom 10. Survey respondents point to confusing terms and conditions in Allianz contracts and a need for pricing transparency, characterizing the customer experience as complex and stressful—a common complaint throughout the insurance industry.

91

Global insurance group AXA showed no signs of movement from the Bottom 10. Like many of its peers, AXA plans are “not easy to understand with tons of terms and conditions,” according to respondents. As a result, AXA’s process is seen as convoluted and its customer experience complex.

For simpler experiences, people would pay:

The top 10 innovations in China that simplify people's lives:

Boarding passes on your smartphone

- 2 An electric car that can drive long distances before needing to recharge
- 3 A checkout system in your shopping cart that lets you scan items as you put them into your cart and check out automatically as you exit the store
- 4 A car that parks itself
- 5 A machine that works as both a washer and a dryer
- 6 A portable charger for your phone that's the size of a credit card and fits in your wallet
- 7 Complimentary usage of tablets in flight or in the terminal
- 8 A tracker to place in luggage so that if it gets lost in transit you can find it with your smartphone
- 9 Large touchscreen/hologram tables in stores that give virtual demos of products
- 10 A self-driving car

Research methodology

To determine the global state of simplicity, Siegel+Gale fielded an online survey with over 10,000 respondents in 7 countries to gather perspectives on simplicity and how industries and brands make people's lives simpler or more complex.

During the study, respondents rated 525 brands. The brands were selected as a representative set that respondents would be most likely to know and/or use in each country.

Sample Set

Between May 3rd and July 2nd, 2013, Siegel+Gale used an online survey to poll:

10,916 consumers in 7 countries:

United States 2,061

United Kingdom 1,803

Germany 1,756

Mainland China 1,782

India 1,750

UAE and Saudi Arabia 1,764

The sample is representative of national demographic distributions in each country.

Survey Topics

This year's respondents answered questions about brand touchpoints within specific industries, the workplace and the relationship between simplicity and innovation, among other topics.

Respondents answered questions around:

- How simple or complex they perceive their life to be
- How familiar they are with certain brands
- If they recently used these brands
- The simplicity/complexity of a brand's communications and interactions in relation to their industry peers

Brand Simplicity Score

Each country rated more than 100 brands. Siegel+Gale researchers used input from in-country offices and existing third-party research to select a representative set of brands that in-country respondents would be most likely to use or experience. We are unable to report on smaller, lesser-known brands for which we could not collect sufficient responses.

The score was calculated with the following inputs:

- How each brand was rated on the simplicity/complexity of its products, services, interactions and communications in relation to its industry peers. User/Non-user ratings were weighted to give more importance to the user experience and remove any possible bias for higher proportions of users for some of the brands
- How consistently the brand experience and communications were rated across respondents (the standard deviation of the ratings)
- How aligned non-user and user perceptions were, privileging aligned perceptions (the difference between user and non-user ratings)
- The Simplicity Score for the brand's industry or category(ies)

Industry Simplicity Score

Each country rated the following industries: Appliances, Automotive, Banks/Retail, Electronics, Fitness, General insurance, Health insurance, Internet/Search, Internet/Retail, Media, Restaurants, Retail/Fashion, Retail/General, Retail/Grocery, Retail/Health and beauty, Shipping/Mail, Social media, Telecom/Cable, Telecom/Cell phone, Travel/Air, Travel/Booking, Travel/Car rental, Travel/Hotels, Travel/Train and Utilities.

The score was calculated with the following inputs:

- The industry's contribution to making life simpler or more complex
- The pain of typical interactions with companies/organizations within the industry
- How the industry's typical communications rank in terms of:
  - Ease of understanding
  - Transparency/Honesty
  - Communicating that customer needs are being cared for/ Making the customer feel valued and appreciated
  - Innovation/Freshness
  - Usefulness

Simple necessities

Consumer demand for a simplified brand experience is clear. So are the benefits—increased profits, greater brand loyalty and more innovation.

So how do you know if your brand is simple or not? And how do you begin?

Take a look at the following 10 questions. The more you can check off with a definitive “Yes,” the closer you are to reaping the rewards of simplicity.

- Is senior leadership committed to providing a simpler customer experience?
- Do I know what our brand’s purpose is, and is it articulated in a simple, memorable and inspiring way?
- Do we have the tools in place to get everyone to consistently deliver on our brand’s purpose?
- Have we made it as simple as possible to innovate at our company?
- Is our brand focused on what drives preference within the market?
- Are our marketing messages in sync with the customer experience?
- Do customers share our view of who we are and what we want to be?
- Are our products and services clear and easy to navigate?
- Do we know the brand experiences where simplicity would be most appreciated and inspire greater brand loyalty?
- Do we have a simple road map for our customer journey?

Still see a lot of complexity at your organization?

We can help.

simplify

Siegel+Gale is the simplicity company.

We seek it, defend it and embrace it in everything we do to help brands reach their true potential. Simplicity is the centerpiece of the strategies we develop that reveal the unique truths of an organization, the engaging stories we create that connect brands with their audiences and the meaningful experiences we deliver that are both unexpectedly fresh and remarkably clear.

Since 1969, global strategic branding firm Siegel+Gale has championed simplicity for leading corporations, nonprofits and government organizations worldwide. We have offices in New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, London, Hamburg, Riyadh, Dubai, Shanghai and Beijing, but we're willing to fly just about anywhere. We're also not alone. As part of Diversified Agency Services, a division of Omnicom Group Inc., we have strong partners all around the world.
