Be Prepared to Take a Segmented Approach to Communication

Understand Who your Detractors and Advocates Are

Breakdown

- While those rating companies the highest tend to skew younger and female and those assigning the lowest reputation scores are more likely to be older and male, there is no consistency across EU5 countries
- In the country with the highest polarization in reputation ratings – the UK – young females view companies most favorably, while middle-aged men are more skeptical

Difference in Reputation Scores Between Lowest and Highest Rating Demographic Group by Country 2018

UK Spotlight: Demographic-Specific Drivers of Reputation

Breakdown

- Young females in the UK care more about Financial Performance and Products/Services – areas in which they rate companies the highest
- Middle-aged men value Citizenship and Governance more – but rate businesses the lowest in both areas
- You need to understand the specific drivers for each segment to most effectively build reputation
- Unless companies create targeted content/communication they risk creating reputation gaps
